INTERVIEW WITH JUDGE POLAND.

Judge Poland, Chairman of the Congressional avestigating Committee appointed to inquire nto the political condition of Arkansas, arrived iere this morning from Little Rock. He called iere this morning from the conversed for ipon the Attorney General and conversed for home time about the new complications. He will eave for home to-morrow. In regard to his opinion about the troubles he frankly said that opinion about the troubles he frankly said that opinion about the troubles he frankly said that the count, and some think they will not return the State republican. e had none. He took some testimony last spring at the close of the session. Messrs. Ward and Sayler resumed at Little Rock during the summer, and he did not know the character of the testimony taken by them, and no opinion could be formed until the testimony was all printed and reviewed. For that reason he had declined to be

'How is it, then." I asked, "that you are so extensively quoted on this subject?"

He answered, "I was called upon in St. Louis by half a dozen newspaper gentlemen to get my views and I told them as I have told you, that it would be decidedly improper for me to express an opinion in regard to a matter I had been sent to officially investigate, and, were I disposed to do so, ignorance of a great part of the testimony taken would prevent me doing so. That was all that was said, resulting in six different interviews, all of which differed in the would-be important parts. If the papers can stand it I certainly can.'

'It is reported here, Judge, that since the elections the barbers tax you more than before ?"
"That," replied the Judge, "Is as true as the St. Louis interview. My face may have been for a time a little longer than usual, but it has resumed, as you see, its wonted serenity and grave proportions. I am content to do as my neighbor Butler proposes-stick to my legal practice in Vermont so long as men have liberal lees to pay or a poor wretch needs my professional assistance."

Leaving the Judge to finish a letter to his colleague, Mr. Sayler, I bade him good night. Governor Garland, of Arkansas, telegraphs to Lowe & Archer, his counsel, here, to-day, from Little Rock, as follows :-"All peace. No noise. No disturbance."

Ex-Governor Baxter Thanked by the State Senate for His Conservative Policy-Alleged Fraud in Dorsey's Election-The Gubernatorial Contest-Smith Still Hiding.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 20, 1874. A joint resolution passed the Senate to-day, by a majority of twenty-lour to five, extending thanks to ex-Governor Baxter for his efforts in behalf of the conservative people of the State in securing the cailing of the late constitutional convention and the adoption of the new constitution. A joint resolution was offered in the same body and referred to the Committee on Federal Relations, claiming trand in

THE ELECTION OF THE HON. S. W. DORSEY to the United States Senate, and calling for the appointment of a joint committee to investigate intion will pass. At the time Dorsey was elected it was claimed by the Gazette, the leading demoreacting our nail of the State, that his election was a victory over Cayton and McClure and a 'riumph for Baxter. Dorsey received the votes of fifteen democratic members of the Legislature when elected, some of whom are members of the body news in Sept. For these reasons It is claimed how in season. Congressman Sayler, of Ohto, democratic member of the Arkansas Investigation Committee, arrived to-day. He is much incensed at the position assumed by Judge Poland in resuting statements made by him to the Chicago Iribune correspondent and an affair of honor is not improbable.

Governor Smith, in interview to-day, asserts that the sensational despatches forwarded from this point to Washington, came from his enemies for the purpose of injuring him.

POSTMASTER GENERAL JEWELL.

Visit of the New Cabinet Officer to Boston-Reception by the Board of Trade-A Few Remarks Complimentary to the Solid Men. BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 20, 1874. Postmister General Jewell is the hero of the hour in Boston just now. He arrived here with his family this morning and proceeded at once to the Beacon street residence of his brother, Hawley Jewell. During the forenoon the Postmaster Gen-Post Office, and there met the Hon, Henry La Pierce, Ron. Alexander H. Rice and others, with whom various matters relating to the Post Office Department were discussed. After a cursory examination of the present Post Office Mr. Jewell, accompanied by General Burt, Mr. Bryant, the superintending architect of the new building; Mr. Curtis, the negotiator for the land for the extension, and several other gentlemen connected with the office, visited the new Post Office and Sub-Treasury, in Devonshire street. The apartments designed for the Post Office are well nigh completed. the lettering of windows and some trifling painters! work alone remaining to be done. Portions of the floor of the great pavilion have been inclosed in iron netting, intended to portion off the various departments, and the entire office was in excelient condition for inspection. Later in the day the Postmaster General visited the Merchants' Exchange, upon the invitation of the officers of the Board of Trade. A large number of merchants and business men were present and extended a cordial greeting to the guest of the hour. The Postmaster General was introduced by Mr. Edward Kemble, Vice President of the Boston Board of Trade, saying that there was among them to-day a citizen public position, returning from it to assume a more responsible one at the appointment of the President of the United States. He said that he was here to-day feeling an interest in the business of Boston and the places of public business. Hon. Marshall Jewell then spoke as follows, being received with cheers:—

MR. JEWELL'S SPEECH.

GENTLEMEN OF THE BOSTON BOARD OF TRADE—f do not need to say, I trust that I thank you for this welcome—for this privilege of being presented to the solid men of Boston; for the privilege—for certaining it is a privilege to any American—to be in any way considered a representative man. I need not say that I am glad to be in Boston, for I was saways glad to be here where I first came thirty years ago to learn my trade of the frest dent of this Board. Mr Cummings. I think I was very glad to get here then, and I have been glad many times to have been here since. I am very glad to we for the very same reason. Boston, eminext in many particulars, is eminent, more than for anything else, for the integrity, enterprise,

His pawere most respected by a large circle of wealthy friends and acquaintances. Mr. Winans devoted his early life to the cultivation of the higher English branches, and especially to arithmetic, bookkeeping and the sciences, and thus became in time an astute and correct financier in the lucrative position to which he finally raised himself. Previous to 1850 he was the head of a wholesale grocery establishment in South street, known as Winans & Brother. It was during the time he spent in this station as a meremant that he became acquainted with the most prominent and weathy men of this and other adjacent cities. In 1855 the Hamilton Fire Insurance company was organized and he entered the organization as an active and most useful member. His characteristic energy did not remain unrewarded; for after a very few years he was elected to the office of one secretary, in her of Mr. Barns, who held that position immediately previous, on the death of President Smith in 1864, Mr. Winans was elected President of the organization, and has ever since, up to his demise, retained that position and conducted the affairs of the company with great care and ability. He married at a reasonable age and has let several children. He was a Christian, generous, polite, affable and courfectus gentleman, and known as such almost during the whole period of his life to the most prominent and influential men in New York. He was intimately connected with two or three of the East River ferry companies and one of the principal managers of them. Mr. Winans was corn in 1802, and breathed his last yesterday with evidences of resignation and Christian fortitude. he finally raised himself. Previous to 1850 he was

Rev. John Gibbs.

Rev. John Gibbs, at one time a very prominent Congregational preacher in this vicinity, died at residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Quarles Buttrick, Brooklyn, on Thursday. Mr. Gibbs was eighty-eight years old, and forty years of his active life were passed as a Congregational preacher on Long Island from Upper Aquebogue to Belleport. He was a zealous worker in the ministry, an ear-nest advocate of temperance and was known and beloved by many people. He resigned his pastoral duties four years since, and for a year past has been bedridden with paralysis. His funeral will take place to-morrow, from the residence of his son-in-law, No. 1,099 Bergen streat, at one o'clock F. M.

Tom Hood, who was noted not only as the son of a great man, but as a bright and genial writer as well has just died, after a painful liness. He was born at Lake House. Wanstead, Essex, England, January 19, 1835, and was only ten years old at the time of his father's death. He was educated at University College School and South Grammar School, and entered as a commoner at Pembroke College, Oxford, in 1853, where he passed all the examinations for the degree of Bacnelor of Arts. While at Oxford he wrote his first book, "Fen and Pencell Fictures," which was published in 1855. This was followed by "Quips and Cranks" and "Daughters of King Daker and Other Poems." in 1861; "Loves of Tom Tucker and Little Bo-Peep, Rhyming Rigmarole," in 1862; "Captain Master's Conderen," a novel, and "Jokes for Little Folks," in 1868, in the year last named he was appointed editor of Fun and continued to hold the position till insideath. Besides his contributions to the columns of Fun he wrote much for the magnetic something more ambinous though not with very great success. His novels are "A Disputed Inheritance," "Golden Heart," "Monevis Worth" and "Love and Valor." He occasionally employed his pencil as well as his pen, and illustrated his father's comic verses "Precoccous Peggy." The early death of his father has been often lamented, and the sad circumstances of the decease of the elder Hood will be recalled now that the son has followed the father to the grave, dying even an earlier death. A STOICAL SUICIDE.

He Dedicates His Body to the Art of Cremation Before Attempting to Take His Life-His Probable Recovery. A strange phase of human nature was developed yesterday afternoon in the uncommon philosophy of a would-be suicide, who, in the cool contemplation of taking his life, bore in mind what he conceived to be the interests of his fellow man; by offering himself as a sacrifice to the doctrine of cremation; but the generous self-immolator was thwarted in his designs, as will appear by the following:-At about four P. M. yesterday Officer Coffey, in the Grand Central depot laboring under an epileptic fit, and, summoning an ambulance, he conveyed him to Bellevue Hospital, where restora-tives were applied with marked success. On the person of the patient was found, loaded, a seven-chamber revolver and a note which read as fol-

To Inose who Find My Body:

My name is August Verrier. Being satisfied that this life has nothing more interesting for me here I have done this act. You may take my body for cremation.

It was evident that the man contemplated sultitude, and would have probably carried out his intentions had it not been for the fit that overtook him. Although after long, well directed medical treatment the patient recovered sufficiently to converse, he relused to give his residence or occupation, or to impart any information that would throw further light on the case. It is thought he will entirely recover, and be compelled, consequently, to defer his philanthropic act to a future time.
